Re: White Sands Construction

My firm recently completed two projects with White Sands Construction, both were for New Mexico Highlands University.

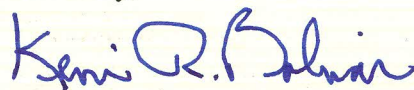

The Natatorium renovation required working around an existing indoor swimming pool while making extensive heating, cooling and electrical revisions. Interior finishes and new roofing was also part of the project. White Sands worked with us and the University to provide a successful project.

The Lora Shields renovation required extensive demolition and working within a building that was occupied during construction. Interior renovations, window replacement, landscaping, and the installation of solar shades went smoothly.

Both of these projects are seeking LEED silver certification. White Sands contributed greatly in providing us with arduous, but necessary paperwork to complete the LEED submittal package. They even recycled more construction material that anticipated, facilitating our submission.

Based upon these two projects and the cooperation extended to our design team, I would not hesitate in recommending White Sands Construction for future construction projects.

Sincerely,

Kevin R. Balciar, AIA, LEED AP
